

Monday 24th August 2026 – Creag Uchdag

Creag Uchdag (crag of the hollows), a Corbett. Distance Approx 9 miles, ascent 667m, time taken approximately four and half hours.

Above map is from Walk Highlands, however we followed a more out-and-back route to avoid the rocky shoreline and steep descent to Loch Lednock Reservoir.

Eight of us set out from Broxden park and ride to the parking area in Invergeldie at the end of the public road in Glen Lednock. The weather was ideal for walking. Sunny without too much heat.

We walked west along the tarmac estate road passing a staging area for Oxygen Conservation's fencing project. Once through the gate we continued on and soon took the right fork and began our ascent up the track. As we gained height, we were able to look down and enjoy the views across the impressive Lednock Dam and Loch Lednock Reservoir which sadly looked to be rather low on water.

We made our way onto the open mountain moorland following some well-placed ATV tracks over the dry moorland and ascended the intermediate top of Meall Dubh Mòr (809m). At any other time of the year this would be a very boggy walk.

From Meall Dubh Mòr we continued following the high ground across the grassy and heathery plateau towards Creag Uchdag with some deer running ahead of us.

The final stretch led to the summit trig point at 879 metres, offering expansive views north over to the Ben Lawers range and Schiehallion.

For the descent we skirted round the side of Meall Dubh Mòr and then retraced our steps.

Once safely back to the cars we drove to Comrie Café where we enjoyed a selection of tea, coffee, cakes and ice creams.

Pausing on the way up with the dam behind us in the background.

Loch Lednock Reservoir

Following a faint ATV track up across the moorland

Coffee break in the sun

The final climb up to Meall Dubh Mòr

Lunch on top of Creag Uchdag with the trig point just behind us.

The descent with Loch Lednock Reservoir below us.

Looking west along Loch Lednock Reservoir.